G.O.P. REGULARS BAR INSURGENTS OUT OF CAUCUS

Act Hurts Madden's Speakership Rate.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 29.—(Special.)—Disclosure of the exclusion of the Wisconsin representatives and other La Follette supporters from the forthcoming caucus coming Republican caucus has centered attention on the spectacular struggle between Representative Madden (Rep., Ill.) and Representative Longworth (Rep., O.) for the speakership of the house.

Unless one of the candidates should withdraw, therefore, the speakership contest will be decided by the caucus of Republican members elect of the next house called for Feb. 27. Representative Wood (Rep., Ind.), chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, admitted in the house today that he had omitted to send caucus invitations to the La Follette members.

Action Helps Longworth. The exclusion of the thirteen La Follette supporters helps Longworth, who was elected to the speakership by the caucus of the Republican party. If admitted to the caucus they presumably would vote for Madden.

The Pennsylvania delegation of thirty-six Republicans, the largest Republican delegation in the house, may be the determining factor in the contest. The Pennsylvanians expect to vote as a unit, or nearly so, and are keeping both Longworth and Madden guessing. Longworth supporters say the outcome depends on the Pennsylvania vote. Representative Britten (Rep., Ill.), manager of the Madden campaign, asserts that his candidate now has votes enough pledged to assure election, regardless of the vote of Pennsylvania or the exclusion of the La Follette men.

Speaks for La Follette Group. Representative Frear (Rep., Wis.), speaking in the house, protested against the disciplining of members supporting the third party ticket. Reference was made to Theodore Roosevelt's breaking away from strict party principles, Mr. Frear commented.

"I much doubt if at any time then or thereafter the present majority leader, Mr. Longworth, would have voted to excommunicate Theodore Roosevelt from the Republican party," Roosevelt, Hiram Johnson, Garfield, Beveridge, Pinchot, McCormick, and other eminent Republicans, like Wood in the Philippines, Poindexter in Peru, and I may add, Kellogg, ambassador to England, all then and since high in the party councils, what fall, I believe, engaged jointly in political wrangling or reconstruction of the Republican party."

Ohio Representative Breaks In. Representative Longworth interrupted Mr. Frear and asked him whether any members of the Wisconsin delegation had gone into other states and advocated the election of Democratic candidates for congress. "I do not know," replied Frear. "I speak only for myself. I know I did not."

"The gentleman, however, spoke against the interests of the Republican party," said Longworth. "I speak for the candidacy of Senator La Follette, but I never reflected on the highest officer of the administration."

"Did the gentleman advocate the election of Senator La Follette?" continued the majority leader. "I assume," replied Frear, "he was on the ticket. I do not know his name was ever mentioned."

Progressives Must Repent. Urged by Representative Barker (Tex.), if the insurgents would be admitted to the Republican caucus, Representative Wood said: "I want to say it is always best to repent. If these gentlemen will come back and ask for admittance into our door, after some time for repentance, they will be admitted."

Representative King (Rep., Ill.) asked where Wood got his authority for refusing an invitation to the caucus to any Republican member of the house.

"I have no right whatever to refuse an invitation to any Republican member of this congress, but I have the right to conclude who are Republicans and who are not by their professions," Wood replied.

CO-EDS AROUSED WHEN JUSTICE RELEASES MORON

Co-eds of Northwestern university were contemplating calling an indignation meeting last night after William Davis, colored man arrested Wednesday night as the snowball throwing moron, had been set free by Police Magistrate Nazzari Barzumanian.

Davis was charged with indecent exposure, but Justice Barzumanian altered the accusation to disorderly conduct, which involves a less severe penalty.

When Davis had pleaded guilty to the altered charge the justice ordered all the co-eds who had flocked to the court, and even the reporters, to leave the room.

The reporters protested and finally were allowed to remain. Miss Geraldine Watson and Miss Frances Westcott, co-eds living at Mrs. Richardson's annex, a dormitory at 2010 Sherman avenue, then identified the prisoner as the man who had thrown snowballs at their window late Wednesday night.

The judge first fined him $200 and costs, which the prisoner said he could not pay. The fine was then reduced to $100 and Davis was freed on his promise to pay the fine as soon as he could.

Alaska Dogs in 800 Mile Death Race

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—A third dog team relay carrying diphtheria antitoxin for Nome was due in Ruby, 250 miles from Nenana, between 10 o'clock and midnight tonight, according to word received here. Exceptional time is being made by the relay teams carrying serum to relieve the diphtheria quarantined town.

Anchorage, Alaska, Jan. 28.—(Delayed.)—[By the Associated Press.]—Antitoxin for Nome, on the Seward peninsula, 500 miles from Nenana on the Alaska railroad, was tonight, reportedly received here indicated, 125 miles on its way to help quell an epidemic of diphtheria that smote whites and Eskimos in Nome.

The package of life saver, which was rushed from here to Nenana, 200 miles from here, by the railroad, weighs about twenty pounds. It is being forwarded by relays of dog teams arranged by the United States government. Bill Shannon left Nenana at 11 o'clock last night in a temperature 68 degrees below zero and by 11 o'clock this morning had covered the sixty-five miles to Tolovana.

At Tolovana, Jim Kalland waited with his dogs in harness. He said he would reach Hot Springs, sixty-five miles to the west, by 8 o'clock tonight.

Leonard Seppala, far-famed racing driver of dog teams in the derby that were one of the world sporting classics when Nome was young and rich in new found gold, rushing forth to meet the oncoming relays. It was estimated here tonight that the antitoxin will be in Nome one week from tomorrow.

The first 300 miles from Nenana the winter trail is on the ice of the Yukon river. Along that part of the river are many settlements of Indians, with a scattering of mail carriers and of trouble shooters that the signal corps of the United States army keeps in the country to maintain telegraphic communication.

Use Old Serum. Nome, Alaska, Jan. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Epidemic strikes Nome, fighting against the spread of hundreds of cases of diphtheria, today demonstrated to the medical world that aged antitoxin, thought worthless after six months, retains its curative powers for years.

Dr. Curtis Welch, in charge of the forces fighting the epidemic, pointed today to the results obtained from the old serum, used under pressure of necessity, for generally the remedy has been believed worthless after it is six months old.

GRAIN GROWERS
FROWN AS PRICES
SOAR IN MARKET

Few Profit by Advances,
Ridgway Says.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.
[Farm Editor of The Tribune.]

Eighty per cent of America's grain growers frown while 20 per cent of them grin over the price of wheat climbing above the $3 mark. The bulk of the farmers' wheat crop in the United States left the farm at a price averaging 65 cents a bushel under the present $3 price, according to some estimates.

Tenant farmers were the less fortunate. They were forced to sell while the land owners in many cases have been able to hold their grain and will share the high price. One farmer in Kansas has been holding his grain for four years. There is a storage bill of 50 cents a bushel on his first crop. He expects to get $2.50 a bushel.

Four-fifths of the grain has left the farm and a big bushel is now being tossed about among the speculators. The public will pay the bill in terms of higher priced flour.

Public Asks Some Questions.

So the public has begun to ask what caused the high prices? What has caused the country-wide speculation that has attracted the bootblack, the barber, the cab driver, and the million-aire into the speculative field?

"It began last summer," according to E. F. Rosenbaum, in charge of the export business of the Grain Marketing company, "when a combination of circumstances started speculators to accumulating lines of wheat for deferred deliveries. There was an actual unstimulated demand for wheat from all directions until about the middle of November, and up to that time there had been a constant and gradual advance in the wheat market."

"The price began to advance sharply, and the more they advanced in the speculative field the less the demand for the cash wheat until today I doubt whether there is a bushel of American wheat sold for shipment from this country."

Reports of Huge Sales.

Mr. Rosenbaum is with a corporation that is represented to be in effect a farmer's co-op, a combination that is made up mainly of the old Armour Grain company and the Rosenbaum Grain company. He continued, discussing wheat prices:

"Since the middle of November there have been daily reports made of huge sales for export, but apparently these sales are never actually filled. Exporters report no such sales. The credulous gambling public has been fed reports which have caused men and women to rush in and buy lavishly."

"Here comes report of the sale of a million barrels of flour to Russia, a million bushels of wheat to a country like Hungary, and forty cargoes of 10,000,000 bushels of wheat to London. The public did not know what American wheat was selling at in Antwerp at that time. The Antwerp price was so much below ours that our wheat could have been shipped back to New York and sold for less than wheat bought in Chicago and shipped to New York."

Says Russia Is Not a Factor.

Mr. Rosenbaum says the bulk of the world's wheat shortage is in Europe, where there was 178,000,000 bushels. Russia, he has not, a factor since 1914.

But he points out that Europe is not taking so much wheat at higher prices. According to his figures for the ten weeks ending Jan. 24, Europe imported 12,300,000 bushels of wheat a week, as against 17,740,000 each week for the preceding nine weeks, and since the middle of November there has been a gradual decrease in the percentage of United States wheat shipped and a steadily increasing percentage from other countries. Last week, he says, out of the total quantity of wheat shipped only 4,700,000 bushels went from North America, including Canada, which probably shipped half.

Figures for the week's shipment to Europe announced yesterday showed that the Argentine shipped 5,500,000.

World Faces Wheat Shortage,
Warning of Rome Institute

ROME, Jan. 25.—[United News.]—The world wheat situation is gloomy. Not only does a bona fide shortage exist, but conditions forecast a famine.

That is the International Institute of Agriculture's summary of the situation which has lifted the price of bread in London and sent the price of wheat in the Chicago market to dizzy heights. The institute is the only impartial international organization engaged in collecting agricultural data. Reports of conditions are furnished it by various agencies throughout the world.

Ground for Anxiety.

There is ground for anxiety at the skyrocketing price of wheat, according to the institute's reports, but the institute believes that a definite forecast would be premature. United States sowings are designated as satisfactory, but hard, it seems certain, that great grain belts of Hungary and Roumania, have been deficient in snow this winter and this will decrease the estimate.

But Russia now appears as a disturbing factor to upset all previous calculations. That former great exporter of wheat and rye cannot feed its own people this year, and the soviet government now is buying wheat and flour in Canada and in the Argentine and placing orders in Germany and elsewhere to save off the famine that threatens over 11,000,000 of her people.

How much wheat Russia will buy is mere conjecture, but 25,000,000 bushels of wheat would be a very small quantity, yet that amount purchased by Russia would have a serious effect on the market where there is such a close balance between supply and demand.

These facts make it apparent that the Broomhall estimate of exportable surplus is too liberal, and in view of the changed circumstances that this estimate of import needs must be cut to the point of scraping the bins of world supply.

CHICAGO RULES
WORLD'S WHEAT,
LONDONER SAYS

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 25.—[Special.]—The jury in the trial of Gaston B. Means and Col. Thomas B. Feider, on an indictment charging conspiracy to obstruct justice, returned a sealed verdict at 5:50 o'clock tonight, after deliberating five hours and forty-five minutes. The jurors will reassemble when court convenes tomorrow morning, at which time the verdict will be read. Col. Feider is out on bail. Means is confined under guard in a hotel.

The trial began nearly three weeks ago, and through it the accused men were under an almost constant storm of attack. Frank P. Walsh of counsel for Col. Feider, summing up, argued that the $85,000 paid Col. Feider's law firm by the men convicted for using the mails to dispose of the stock of the Crager Glass Casket concern was for legitimate legal services.

Grills Elmer Jarnecke.

He grilled Elmer W. Jarnecke of Chicago, who was indicted with the two defendants, and whose plea of guilty automatically made him a witness for the government.

Of the Crager system, principals Walsh spoke bitterly as "a band of conscienceless swindlers who came from Chicago to New York to exploit the public."

Aside from this conviction, Walsh asserted, Means "comes here, so far as the rules of law possibly can be concerned, with a clean reputation," a man who has a "human touch about him that naturally makes people call him Gaston."

Kind Word for Daugherty.

Mr. Walsh, commenting on the presence of former Attorney General Daugherty as a witness and of his regime as head of the government law department, said:

"Although I am opposed to Harry Daugherty politically, I believe that there was a conspiracy and that the master minds in it were Means and Feider."

During the time the jury was out Means showed signs of nervousness. He is under bail totaling $40,000 for previous offenses and charges.

COL. HAYWARD QUILTS
AS U. S. PROSECUTOR
IN NEW YORK DISTRICT

New York, Jan. 25.—Col. William Hayward, United States district attorney, today announced his resignation. Several of the district attorney's assistants, including John Holley Clark, his chief assistant, recently announced their resignations, some on the ground of insufficient salaries.

Successor in Doubt.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.—The formal resignation of Mr. Hayward is expected to be received at the department of justice tomorrow and it is probable the nomination of his successor will be sent soon afterward to the senate. Those under consideration for the office are known to include Alexander Brough, New York City magistrate, and Emory R. Buckner, attorney.

EMMA GOLDMAN WARNS AMERICA AGAINST REDS

Paints Awful Picture of Russia.

By JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A furious onslaught against bolshevism and all the features of the present Russian regime was made here tonight by Emma Goldman, well known anarchist who was deported from America several years ago, speaking on the subject of "The Bolshevik Myth." A large audience, evidently representing all shades of opinion concerning Russia, carried on an interminable war among themselves during Miss Goldman's speech, but used to such tactics, she carried on with her indictment of Lenin, Trotsky, and company, and effectually silenced critics.

She declared the condition of the peasants is worse than under the czar in spite of their possession of land. There is no seed for the next planting, children are emaciated and unclothed and unable to attend school, there are no teachers physically able to maintain classes, and the schools are uninhabitable and unheated. "Mr. Lenin was a bolshevik," said Miss Goldman. "He meant to them a new autocracy, and since his death his spirit and all it means goes marching on. The peasants refuse to help the cities, not because they do not sympathize with the workers or are unwilling to help them but because they know the benefits will go only to the small parasite class composing the bolsheviks. "The same false doctrines now destroying Russia would be established in England and America if the bolsheviks and their sympathizers had their way. While millions starve in Russia the bolshevik leaders spend millions of rubles spreading propaganda abroad. The bolsheviks have crushed the real workers' revolution in Russia and will repeat the performance wherever they can. They have no common interests with either the workers or peasants, but only desire to constitute themselves into a small ruling class."

POPE RECALLS PRELATE TO BE MEXICAN ADVISER

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
Mexico City, Jan. 29.—[Tito Crespi.]—guardian of the archives of the papal office here since the expulsion of Mgr. Philippi, papal delegate, by former President Obregon, more than a year ago, has been recalled to Rome, where it is said he will be confidential adviser to the pope on Mexican Catholic and other affairs.

Father Crespi has taken great interest in Mexican affairs. Therefore it is considered here that he will be a good man to advise the head of the Catholic church. The Mexican government, while not officially recognizing the papal delegate, will, it is said, place no obstructions in his way so long as he works within the Mexican law.

TORRIO AGAIN REFUSES TO TELL WHO SHOT HIM

Police Lose Hope; Gang Forsakes Alterie.

Johnny Torrio, from the bed in Jackson Park hospital, on which he is reported recovering from shots of rival vice gangsters, last night definitely ended police hopes that he might aid in finding his assailants. "No use bringing any one here; I won't 'rap' them," he told Lieut. Charles Egan.

The police officer had taken two more suspects to Torrio's bedside to see if the wounded man would identify them as two of three gunmen who shot him last Saturday.

Torrio said neither of the men was implicated and told the policeman that it is a waste of time to ask him to betray his attackers.

Alterie Ordered Into Exile. As a result of the gun flourishing by Louis Alterie in the Friars' Inn on Wednesday night he has been ordered into exile by two different vice and rum empires in Chicago, the police were told yesterday.

One of them is his own, the remnants of the bold gang of hijackers and wholesale bootleggers with which Dean O'Banion dared Torrio, czar of them all, until O'Banion was killed by gunmen.

"Nothing hard about you; you talk too much. You'll get us all into trouble, so get out before you're dragged out," was the substance of the message sent to Alterie.

And it was said that in a north side hotel last night that Alterie, the two gun man who offered to shoot it out with the slayers of O'Banion, was meekly packing his traveling bags, prepared to obey the mandate regarding less of day and federal demands for his presence here.

Moran Out on Bond. Judge William J. Lindsay yesterday freed George Moran, accused of shooting Torrio, on bonds of $5,000 after physicians had certified that Torrio is no longer in danger of dying. Police asked Moran be held a little longer, pending the uncovering of more evidence, but the judge ruled otherwise.

Joseph Smith, arrested in federal court Wednesday while he sat in a jury box armed with two guns waiting for Alterie's arraignment before Judge Cliffe in connection with the Sieben brewery robbery, appeared yesterday before Judge John H. Lyle on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

His attorneys demanded a jury trial and got it, but Judge Lyle ordered $50,000 bonds, which were furnished by Morris Kahn.

The bonds moved Chief of Detectives Schoemaker and Detective Captain John Stege to command Judge Lyle and protest his removal to a civil court, just ordered by Chief Justice Harry Olson.

TRY 25 TODAY FOR VIOLATING U. S. GAME LAW

Prominent Citizens to Appear in Court.

Twenty-five Chicago and Aurora nimrods and epicures accused of possessing wild ducks out of season will form the first group of alleged violators of the federal migratory bird law to be taken into court as a result of a drive now being made by United States Game Warden K. F. Roehen and Deputy Warden E. N. Shoier.

They will appear today in Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe's court, where they will be subject to heavy fines if found guilty.

Prominent Citizens on List. Among those who will be haled to account on charges of secreting game in private warehouses are A. H. Sevensinghaus, 3122 Armitage avenue, former vice president of the Chicago board of education; J. Bruce Amell, state's attorney of Kane county; C. H. Boyer, 48 South La Salle street; F. J. Forrester, Illinois Athletic club; W. J. Cameron, 110 West Oak street; S. Hodges, 116 South Michigan avenue; Stephen F. Pansel, 7520 South Shore drive; George S. Ballard, 18 West Lake street; Edward Beckwith and Edward Robinson, Aurora, and Ross O. Judd, St. Charles.

Liability to Heavy Fines. Although the migratory bird act has been on the statute books for a number of years, it is said today's arraignment will be the largest since the act became effective.

The duck season closes on Dec. 31 and hunters are allowed to keep the fowl for ten days. After that they are contraband and the owner is liable to a fine of $500 for each violation.

SMASH WINDOWS AT THE HOME OF CORONER WOLFF

Several windows were smashed early yesterday in the home of Coroner Oscar Wolff, 16611 Avenue H, during an attack he believes was caused by a hot aldermanic battle in the Tenth ward. The coroner's regular Republican organization, with a few Democrats, is supporting William Rowan, editor of the Daily Calumet, against Ald. Cross, protégé of Pat H. Moynihan, Illinois commerce commissioner.

A meeting of a woman's organization backing Rowan had been held in the Wolff home earlier.

Immediately after a shower of bricks had smashed the windows Mrs. Wolff heard an automobile race away.

Pipeman William Shultz became unconscious and several others of engine company No. 53 were overcome by smoke last night in fighting a fire in the basement of a four story flat building at 1201 East 63d street. The fire caused little damage.

RECOVERED $79. Stephen Kennedy, 2115 North Lincoln street, reported to the Maxwell street police that he was robbed of $79 by two Negroes.

HAYS' FOES ASK GEN. PERSHING TO FIGHT FILM WAR

Will Take Up Offer After Return from Peru.

New York, Jan. 29.—[Special.]—In the face of the prospect of the greatest war ever fought between two groups in the motion picture industry, Gen. John J. Pershing has been offered command of the forces opposing those embraced in what is known as the Will Hays organization.

Before he left for Peru, it was learned today, the leader of the American Expeditionary forces was offered the position and told he practically might name his own salary.

The general said he would take the offer under consideration on his return. It was said today that should Gen. Pershing decline, the position might be offered to Gen. Enoch Crowder.

Chadwick Makes Offer. Admission that Gen. Pershing has been made the offer of a position similar to that of Will Hays was made today by L. E. Chadwick, head of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

"The offer was made to Gen. Pershing before he left for Peru," said Chadwick. "The general said he was sorry it had not been made earlier and said that when he returned, if it was renewed, he would give it careful consideration."

Should Gen. Pershing accept the offer, those familiar with moving picture conditions predicted, it will be possible that others of those concerns now aligned with the motion picture producers and distributors will switch over, following the example of Vitagraph yesterday in announcing its withdrawal from the Hays organization.

Favoritism Is Charged. There have been reports for some time of dissatisfaction among some of the members of the motion picture producers and distributors—the Hays organization. In moving picture circles today, it was said this is due to the impression that Hays is favoring the Famous Players, First National and Metro at the expense of others of the twenty-old members.

The assertion was made today that evidence of a working agreement between members of the big three unopposed by Hays was recently given in the contracts signed with the midwest theaters in Illinois and in the granting to Sam Katz, of the First National, of the McVickers theater in Chicago by the Famous Players.

"The big three are playing together," said one motion picture man. "The other members of the Hays group are out in the cold. Others are likely to take shelter as independents, like the Vitagraph."

FLYERS BARELY MISS VESSEL'S MASTS IN FOG

Death Near at Hand on the Homestretch.

BY LOWELL THOMAS.
(Copyright, 1925, by The Chicago Tribune)

After a long night's sleep we celebrated our arrival back on American soil by working all day repairing the fuel pumps that had brought us so near disaster on the flight from Greenland to Labrador, said "Lee" Arnold. "Tuesday morning we were up at dawn ready to hop off. But the weather reports from all along the Labrador coast were far from favorable. However, we decided to leave Ictique for regions to the south less afflicted with icebergs and storms. We had just received word that a severe gale was headed toward Ictique, but Lowell thought it would be safer to try and outrun it than to wait for it to blow over.

"At 11 o'clock we were under way and shortly after leaving Ictique we again passed our first friend, the huge berg we had flown over on our trip from Greenland.

"About noon while cutting across a narrow peninsula covered with scrubby pines, we got a thrill out of seeing trees once more, the first we had passed since leaving England.

Tackle Old Enemy Fog.
"Two hours and fifty-five minutes out from Ictique we encountered our old enemy, fog. This was just as we were leaving the North Atlantic and heading over Bellefleur strait toward the gulf of St. Lawrence. We knew that the most easterly coast of Labrador was on our right and that the northernmost tip of Newfoundland was on our left. But the fog was so thick we could see neither of them. The farther we flew the thicker it grew.

"Lowell, who usually spent his nights poring over weather charts, figured that this fog bank could only be local. We tried to climb over it but that proved impossible so we dove down to within ten feet of the water. Meanwhile the wind was increasing and there was a mountainous sea running. It looked as though each wave was going to slap the bottom of the pontoons.

"Fifteen minutes after entering the fog we suddenly slipped across the bow of a steamer. It was steaming toward us and had we met thirty seconds later we would have crashed into the mast or the captain's bridge. Our flying helmets were all that kept our hair from standing on end. But it is frightened us what must have been the thought of the officer on the bridge of that boat when he suddenly saw us flash past him and vanish into the mist? If he was a drinking man I'll wager he swore off that day!

Newfoundland in Sight.
"Just as Smith had prognosticated, within another thirty minutes the fog had thinned out and we had picked up the jagged coast of Newfoundland. Still flying low we sort of played leap frog with one fishing village to another. Every time we passed one the entire population would rush out and wave to us. Although not quite so bleak as Labrador this part of Newfoundland was quite grim and forbidding.

"Most of the way we had to buck a stiff head wind, with the result that it took us six hours to fly the 230 miles from Ictique, Labrador, to Hawkes Bay, Newfoundland. Incidentally this day should not be confused with another by the same name 150 miles further north on the Labrador coast.

"After spending the night on board a destroyer we took off next morning for Pictou, Nova Scotia, 350 miles closer home. For half this distance we flew down the west coast of Newfoundland. I counted the miles off one by one because each brought us nearer and nearer our goal. From Cape Anguille, near the southern tip of Newfoundland we made an hour's flight across a sparkling sheet of blue water which is named Cabot strait, after John and his son Sebastian Cabot, who preceded us across the Atlantic four centuries.

"Several miles from our destination we were met by a Canadian royal air force plane whose occupants waved us an airy salute and then escorted us to Pictou. As we climbed over the harbor we saw Wade's new plane, the Boston III, that had been sent up to Nova Scotia by Gen. Patrick so that Leigh and "Hazel" could finish out the flight with us. Every whistle in Pictou was tooting its shrillest and the

FLIGHT FROM LABRADOR TO U. S.

The world flyers stayed back on American soil on Sept. 5. The map shows their route, by three hops, down from Ictique, Labrador. They hoped to reach Boston, but fog forced them to put in at Casco bay, Maine.

shore was lined with cheering Canadians when we taxied to our moorings. Wade and Ogden were the first out to meet us and with them were our friends MacDonald and Bertram. The officers who had ferried the Boston II, from Langley field to Nova Scotia, "Mac" and I had been bunkies at various aviation camps around the U. S. A. since 1917, so I was more than delighted to see him.

"After fueling up we were taken ashore, ushered into autos, and paraded through the streets behind a band of Scottish Highlanders, hundreds of Canadian and American sailors, and thousands of school kiddies, and civilians. The streets were all decorated with bunting and flags, at the corners were big signs reading 'Welcome World Flyers,' and fire and rockets illuminated the sky, and amid the wild shriek of the bagpipes we were hoisted up on a platform where half the population crowded round us. After a few feeble oratorical flights on our part, we went to a lobster party.

"Judging by the prices in Pictou, we had beard the lobster in his native lair. MacDonald told us how he had bought the ones served at the party. It seems that when he had called at a 'fishmongery' the fishmonger had asked him how many he wanted. Although he had decided to spend about $10, merely as a joke, he replied, 'O, give me 50 cents' worth.' To which the proprietor of the fishmongery retorted, 'You can have a dozen for 50 cents.' 'O, well,' said Mac, 'I'll be big hearted. Give me two dozen.' And he actually came back with twenty-four beautiful big juicy lobsters, all for $1!

Lobster Banquets Galore.
"All next day it was so windy and rainy, and the water was so rough that we could hardly even get out to the planes. Fearful lest we might grow bored with life in Pictou, the chamber of commerce reception committee sent the Scotties to cheer us up with their bagpipes. As they rent the air with their wild Highland music our killed friends paraded up and down the lobby, and we were much amused because they seemed unable to play and stand still at the same time. In the evening we were taken aboard the Canadian destroyer Patriot to another lobster banquet, and initiated life members of their mess. This means that if any of us ever get hard up in the years to come, and if the Patriot has not been relegated to the naval yard in the meantime, we can always look upon her as a home for broken down world flyers.

"That night we turned in early, but we were all far too thrilled with the prospect of reaching Boston on the morrow to do much sleeping.

"After repairing the spreader bar on the Chicago we took off at 11 o'clock, turned inland for a fifty mile hop past Pugwash Harbor to the Bay of Fundy. Instead of following the coast of Nova Scotia, from here on we flew down the New Brunswick side of this famous bay, where the tides rise higher than anywhere else in the world.

Back in United States.
"Just south of St. John, N. B., we encountered fog again. It grew so thick that when we passed the boundary between Canada and the United States we were skimming over the water, dodging rocks and little islands. Visibility was nil. A dozen times we came within an ace of crashing. Then we attempted to climb over it, and to get around it. But we were taking enormous chances and Lowell decided that it was not worth while attempting to push through and risk a tragedy when we were so near our final goal. Turning back a few miles we came down in Casco bay, off Merepoint, Me., in a sheltered cove that was ideal for an emergency landing.

"The wealthiest and most hospitable people in New England have their summer homes along the shores of picturesque Casco bay, and as soon as they discovered who we were, we had half the aristocracy of Maine out rowing boats, or running errands, or standing guard over the planes, or carrying anchors.

"Although disappointed because we had not been able to push through to Boston we were delighted to have dropped down in such an ideal spot as Casco bay. Moreover, this accident gave us an opportunity of paying our respects to the memory of America's greatest explorer, Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the north pole, who spent much of his time between expeditions right here where we had been forced down by the fog."

FILM STAR SUES HER MOTHER FOR MILLION SALARY

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29.—(Special.)—The million dollar estrangement between Mary Miles Minter and her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, was brought into court today, after surviving as comment for years. The former actress, now in the east, filed suit for an accounting of sums she estimated as over $1,000,000 which she alleged her mother received for her services during Miss Minter's screen career.

Miss Minter says she was born April 1, 1902, and says she began acting at the age of 6. Her complaint asserts that she permitted her mother to manage her affairs until Oct. 31, 1922.

Miss Minter mentions a contract made for her by her mother with Famous Players-Lasky, in June, 1919, by which she was to receive $1,200,000 for making twenty pictures. This contract was modified, later, she asserts, but she claims her mother collected $700,000.

ADMIRALS SCOUT AIRCRAFT POWER IN TIME OF WAR

Old U. S. Seadogs Stand
by Battleships.

Whatever the cost of aviation, we must have it if it is necessary for the defense of the country. But do not let us indulge in any dreams about a $10,000 airplane sinking a $10,000,000 battleship.

I cannot let such nonsense go unchallenged.

REAR ADMIRAL JOSEPH STRAUSS, U. S. N.

Air force cannot take predominant role in war.

REAR ADMIRAL HILARY POLLARD JONES, U. S. N.

(To the house committee on military affairs.)

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
Washington, D. C., Jan. 29.—(Special.)—Careful speaking rear admirals with reputations to guard, men in their sixties who have given their country important service in two wars, came before the house committee on military affairs today and pleaded for a letup on what they think are fantastic claims in this country's consideration of the role of air power in another war.

They agreed that supplement and popular price magazine layouts showing air fleets wiping out surface fleets make epic reading, but they sort of take the lure out of the layouts by reading, in a dry and detached tone, mathematical facts concerning bombing.

REAR ADMIRAL EXPLAINS.

To get the point of that in all its desolating dryness Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss—the man who invented the superimposed turret system of mounting guns on battleships, who helped blockade the Cuban coast in 1895, and who laid down the barrage of 56,000 mines from Norway to Scotland just twenty years later—asked the committee to listen to these two sentences:

"To show you the difficulty of bombing at all, even though the ship is not resisting the bomber but merely steaming at a reasonable speed, the British ship Agamemnon, condemned to be sunk last year, had 114 bombs dropped on her—ship, under way—without recording a single hit, and this failure was from bombs dropped from a height less than bombs in warfare have heretofore cared to venture for fear of anti-aircraft gunfire.

Take Exception to Mitchell.

But when the admirals took up Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, chief of the army aircraft service, and his Saturday Evening Post strategy, the admirals could not remain detached. They had recourse to pantomime.

If Gen. Mitchell said, "Admiral Jones began," that if a fleet appeared off our coast he would get up from breakfast, go out and sink it, and have his airmen back in time to wash up for luncheon, then—"But the admiral did not finish the sentence. He just looked blank and made funny motions with his hands around his head.

The spirited exchange of shots was ended by the appearance of reinforcements, which compelled the Kiangsu troops to submit to disarmament. The panic when the shooting started resulted in the death or injury of a number of noncombatants.

FIRE HOSTS TO FOLLOW CHIEF'S BODY TO GRAVE

City Plans Impressive
Rites for Buckley.

Elaborate preparations for the funeral services tomorrow morning of Fire Marshal Edward J. Buckley were completed late yesterday. Mayor Dever, the city council and city and county officials, including municipal and state court judges, will have places in the funeral cortege.

A squad of Lincoln park motorcycle policemen and 100 city policemen will lead the procession.

The funeral will be held at the Holy Name cathedral, where, at 9:30 a. m., a solemn requiem high mass will be celebrated. A fire squad truck draped in mourning and surrounded by uniformed firemen, marching in a hollow diamond formation, will bear the chief's body from the home to the cathedral and later to Calvary cemetery, where it will be interred.

To Carry Battered Helmet.

Chief Buckley's familiar red automobile, with its great gong muffled, will follow the casket. Riding with the driver, Capt. Cherney will be Fireman Otto Dahl, carrying the battered helmet worn by the chief for many years. Capt. Cherney and Fireman Dahl alternated as Chief Buckley's chauffeurs.

Five hundred uniformed firemen commanded by Assistant Marshals Michael Corrigan and Daniel Carmody, details from the local fire insurance patrol and delegations of uniformed firemen from Milwaukee, Detroit and St. Louis will march behind the funeral car.

Active pallbearers named yesterday are Assistant Marshals Jeremiah J. McAuliffe, Battalion Chiefs David J. Mahoney, Charles N. Heaney, Patrick Rogers and Francis Byrne, and Capt. James E. Miller. James Hughes and James Galvin, Capt. Miller, it was recalled, acted as best man for Chief Buckley when the latter was married.

Chief Mahoney, 72 years old, is the oldest active member of the department.

Honorary active pallbearers, who will also march, include all of the assistant marshals, Patrick J. Egan, James Costin, John Smith, William Dillon, Andrew F. Gillespie and John P. Stahl, as well as Battalion Marshals John Groves and Thomas Kenny.

Earlier in the day the city council deplored the passing of Chief Buckley, "the hero of many a fire and the preserver of many a life."

CRIMINAL COURT TO TRY GIRL FOR SLAYING MOTHER

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 29.—Dorothy Ellington, 16 year old slayer of her mother, is to be tried by the criminal and not the juvenile court, it was decided today by Superior Judge Frank Murasky, juvenile court judge, when the girl was brought before him for arraignment.

Judge Murasky said the case was so extreme and grave in its nature that it could not be tried in his jurisdiction.

The girl shot and killed her mother when the latter forbade her to attend a "jazz" party.

FORBES TRAITOR TO WAR MAIMED, CRIM DECLARES

Made Harding Dupe,
He Charges.
BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

At noon today, unless the unexpected intervenes, the Forbes-Thompson conspiracy case, involving the outstanding features of the great Veterans' bureau scandals, will be given to the jury by Judge George A. Carpenter.

All arguments were ended last night. Attorney John W. H. Crim, special prosecutor selected by President Coolidge, said at the conclusion of his four hours' address to the jury:

"It is time to call a halt to skulduggery and rascality in Washington. It is for you to say."

Defense Denies Any Crime.

The attitude of the defense is that there has been no crime shown in this case.

Mr. Crim maintained that while Elias H. Mortimer was a fixer and a crook that his explanation of the documentary evidence in the case was the only possible one.

"O, the sins that the friends of Warren Harding visited on him!" Mr. Crim declared. "O, that they had stayed away from Washington. O that he might be alive today to tell how he was duped by his friends."

Mr. Crim traced the beginning of Mortimer's activities in this case to a visit made by Mortimer and his wife to Marion, O., in 1920, during the front porch campaign. There they met Mrs. Caroline Votaw, sister of the late President.

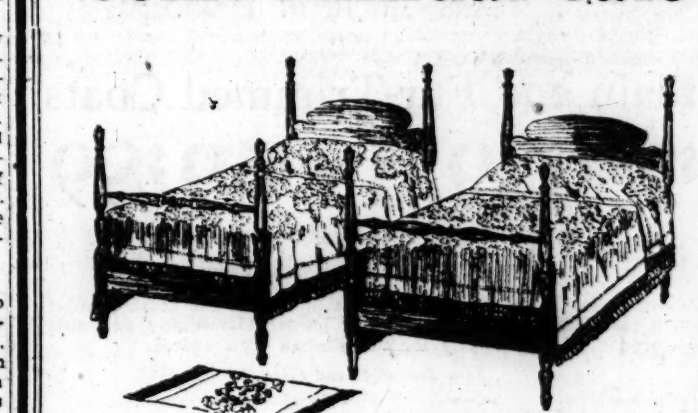

Mortimer Laying His Wires.

"They tell you that John W. Thompson and Charles R. Forbes, clever contractors and business men, were duped by Mortimer," Mr. Crim said. "They tell you that Mortimer moved in the highest social circles in Washington. And they never get any higher than Mrs. Votaw. They deceived this fine woman, a woman of whom there is no question. Mortimer moved among fixers and crooked employees of the government and crooked people who wanted to do crooked business with the government."

"Charles R. Forbes," Mr. Crim said at another moment, "who had the highest trust imposed on a human being in our country in a lifetime, always had Mortimer in the office when hospital contracts were considered."

TREAT CHICAGO FAIRLY, IS NEW DRAINAGE PLEA

It Is Issued by a Noted Group of Engineers.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A plea to the nation for fairness to Chicago in its problem of sewage disposal and water supply is the keynote of a book of 115 pages by the twenty-eight eminent engineers who made a study for the drainage trustees of the questions. These engineers, headed by George W. Fuller of New York, are among the most authoritative in the country.

These experts made a study of the question before the decision of the United States Supreme court on Jan. 5 last. Now this board of review asserts that there "comes to the front for prompt decision a number of highly important engineering problems."

What Is Necessary. "While these have been considered independently," says the report, "they must now be considered collectively. Under these circumstances no solution of the immediate question of what is the best use of the canal can possibly be equitable which does not settle at the same time the regulation of the water levels of the Great Lakes, in the interest of navigation and water power development, and the policy to be adopted regarding the navigable waters from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi and the Ohio rivers."

There are very few public problems of greater importance, more beneficial to so many people if wisely solved before the United States today."

The recommendations of this board of review were printed in The Transactions about a month ago. They suggested extensive expenditures by the Chicago sanitary district, involving more than $100,000,000, which the trustees are willing to carry through. The basis for these recommendations is contained in the latest book. The engineers have noticed the statements published in several parts of the country regarding Chicago, and they make this plea:

Solution Is Feasible. "A practical solution of the problem at Chicago is feasible. Such solution will benefit every interest concerned. It can be secured, however, only by a same and unprejudiced consideration of all its aspects and by the elimination of prejudice. Needless controversy should be avoided. The setting of one section of the country against another accomplishes nothing. Instead of one section blocking the reasonable desires of another because of prejudice, cooperation should prevail. Then constructive results will follow.

The board presents what it believes to be a solution of the problems which have been so long in controversy. It has endeavored by this solution to protect every legitimate interest.

Regulation will not only permit the diversions necessary for the protection of the public health of Chicago and for the water way from the great lakes to the gulf, but it will also greatly benefit navigation and other great lakes interests."

INDICT YOUTH, 16, ON STORIES OF LITTLE CHILDREN

The grand jury returned three indictments of assault with intent to commit rape and one indictment for taking indecent liberties with children yesterday against Seymour Flatow, 16, 4450 North Kedzie avenue, after hearing the stories of several small children who had identified him as the person who attempted to attack them.

RAIL CARRIERS ALWAYS LEAD, MARKHAM SAYS

Inland waterways as an aid to commerce were belittled and attempts to drive a wedge between railroad management and railroad employees were assailed yesterday by executives of two railroads, speaking here.

Charles H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central railroad, spoke with disfavor concerning inland canals before a luncheon of the Agate club in the Congress hotel. His subject was "Transportation of the Future."

against dimension at the dinner of the Industrial club in the Blackstone hotel.

Railroads Chief Reliance. "Whether you like it or not," declared Mr. Markham, "you're going to have to continue to rely on the railroads for your commercial transportation."

"Every little while somebody comes out with a plan for inland waterways. All the inland waterways which have been planned for the United States wouldn't make a dent in the transportation problem."

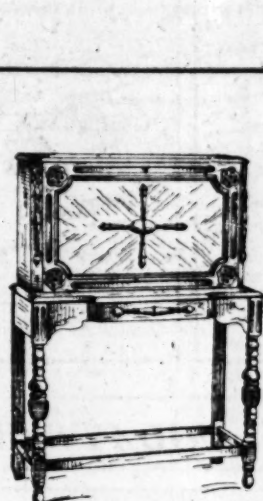

"What is needed is for the railroads to have enough money to expand adequately. The railroads will continue to take care of America's transportation, and they must have enough money to do it well."

"America does not need government ownership of railroads. The American public is getting cheaper service and better under private management."

Against Outside Interference. Mr. Atterbury dwelt on the increased efficiency of railroads. "Any effort on the part of outsiders, whether government or private agencies," he said, "to drive a wedge between railroad management and railroad employees, certainly is not in the interest of the employees themselves, of the company, or of our service to the public."

"Given sound credit, active public support, and cooperation of employees, there need be little doubt about other phases of the so-called railroad problem."

WHATEVER you pay for it, furniture ought to mean to you something more than so many dollars' worth of wood and varnish and upholstery. Furniture means comfort and beauty in the home. There is no way to get so much comfort and beauty in the home as by getting good furniture.

Its primary purpose is, of course, utility. A chair or a davenport is something to sit on. The comfort depends on how easy it is to sit on. The same argument applies to any other furniture—dining room, bedroom, living room; utility is the chief idea.

But beauty is valuable, too. A comfortable or useful piece may just as well be satisfying to the eye. You may not be able to measure that value in dollars as easily as the utility and comfort, but the value is there.

That brings you to quality. The more you value utility and beauty the more you want these things to endure. Good furniture—Scholle quality—lasts a long time. That's what Scholle quality means: furniture made not just to sell, but to use for comfort and beauty for many years.

$20,000 Fire May Be Due to Overheated Stove

Fire late yesterday in lodge rooms on the top floor of a three-story brick building at 1000 East 75th street, which houses a branch office of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanatorium, caused a loss of $20,000. It was suggested that an overheated kitchen range caused the blaze.

DIETZ, FORMER FOOTBALL STAR,
CARLSTROM AID

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 29.—[Special.]—Cyrus E. Dietz of Moline, former Big Nine football star, was named by Attorney General Carlstrom to take charge of the state's famous suit against the Illinois Central railroad. He succeeds Benson Landon, E. I. Brundage's appointee, who again is in Brundage's pocket. The former attorney general in the practice of law. Carlstrom has not indicated whether Dietz will have the assistance of Attorney Hiram T. Gilbert of Chicago, who has been in the case for the state during most of its seventeen years in the courts of La Salle county.

The suit was begun during the administration of Gov. Deussen, and it was estimated that the decree entered on Dec. 1 by Judge J. C. Stough will mean something like $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 in revenue to the state, which will benefit further in future years.

The battle goes back to the provisions of the state charter granted to the Illinois Central which requires it to pay 7 per cent of the gross receipts on the original 70 miles of track. The Stough decision was a big victory for Brundage, and the next move is the defendant's, since the court allowed seven months in which the road must file its statement.

That decree was based on a decision of Judge Stough handed down in October. In other words, it came during the campaign and considerable comment was aroused by the fact that Carlstrom as a candidate had discussed upon the platform the advisability of settling this expensive litigation with the I. ## AUTO BUILDERS DEBATE PROBLEM OF SATURATION

Plenty of Buyers, Some Say; No, Others.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

E. S. Jordan got down to fundamentals concerning the long discussed question of "saturation of the automobile market" when he told the world over the radio on the other night that Americans won't walk, and motor cars will wear out. There always will be a market for automobiles, he added, and cars will get better every year they are manufactured.

Leaders of the industry, however, gathered in Chicago for the silver jubilee automobile show, found an entirely new angle to the manufacturing and merchandising question yesterday when C. W. Nash, president of Nash Motors, said the saturation point already has been reached.

Cites Makers' Figures.

"It has not only arrived, but was reached two years ago," he stated. "One has only to look over the production programs publicly issued by manufacturers in the early days of 1923 to find the manufacturing proof of this statement."

"Where are all the cars the automobile industry was ready to build during those two years? They have not been built in the numbers expected and they cannot be built. I assume that the saturation point in the automobile industry was reached when plant equipment was built to a point where more cars could be made than the public demanded."

"Go down to the Coliseum tonight and look around. You will find that just fifty-two manufacturers are exhibiting cars where a show or so ago more than 100 makers were exhibiting their wares. The show to my mind illustrates a weeding out of the industry. It is slimming down to a small group of manufacturers, best qualified by quality and financial stability to carry on the job and to give the public the utmost for its dollar."

Others Support Nash.

The same general situation is true in every division of the American and even in the European industry, according to veteran engineers and coach builders whose supreme products are on show in the annual Automobile Salon in the Drake hotel.

"In Europe, as in America," Capt. D'Annunzio, exhibitor of the Isotta Fraschini, said, "we are finding that the automobile public is demanding the artistic as well as engineering perfection in a car. Cheapening any part of an automobile for the sake of heavy production and rapid selling is a serious mistake these days on the part of any manufacturer."

H. T. ("Deacon") Strong, vice president of William W. White & Co., leading makers of automobile fabrics, backed up this statement.

"In the past," he said, "we have had engineering experts working on our automobiles who thought nothing but the mechanical and practical side of the car were important. Now the man who buys a car takes its mechanical perfection for granted."

John N. Willis, after considering the "saturation" statement last night, took a stand directly opposite to that of Mr. Nash.

"No saturation point has been reached," he declared.

Auto Show Notes

Another automobile refinement has been brought to America in the form of the new Rawlings window lifting device, now standard equipment on Locomobile, Flint, and the rear doors of the new Marmon cars. The device made its first public appearance at the Drake this week when J. H. Rose, president of the organization in the United States, brought it from England for installation on some of the show cars and in the salon. The device works somewhat on the principle of the old time window shade, regulating windows in the doors of closed cars to the desired height by pressure on a lever at the driver's hand.

L. K. Cooper, divisional sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, took personal charge of the big company exhibit at the Coliseum yesterday. More than 1,000 dealers from the Great Lakes district will meet today at the annual Chevrolet dealers' meeting and banquet to be held in the La Salle hotel. R. H. Grant, general sales manager, will make the principal address at the business meeting.

This year fully 50 per cent of the $75,000,000 which will be spent in advertising motor cars will go into daily and Sunday newspapers, E. Le Roy Pelletier, advertising manager for Rickenbacker, told the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday.

C. L. Cord, vice president and general manager of Auburn, who has made a special display of the new Auburn eight-in-line at the show, declared himself yesterday for full factory equipment on all cars built by the company in 1925.

CARR COLLECTS $150,000 BACK TAXES AS TEST

All the officials participating yesterday in the conference on the county tax situation agreed that the noncollection of $150,000,000 in taxes in three years was calamitous. They all suggested different ways of remedying the situation.

So Patrick J. Carr, county treasurer, who also is county collector of taxes, decided to step out and show officials he could and would collect the delinquent taxes. He said he had five men out for five days and they had collected $150,000 in delinquent taxes. He wants fifty deputy collectors armed with delinquent tax lists, and when taxpayers failed to pay up, the deputies would seize enough property to meet the tax bill.

The plan again was put up to the Circuit Judges' committee, meeting in the county board rooms and composed of Judges Harry Fisher, David Matchett, and Francis S. Wilson, who have the power of fixing the number of county employees.

The judges decided to thrash out the question with the county board. Judge Fisher was enthusiastic for a full trial of Mr. Carr's plan; Anton J. Cermak, president of the board, wanted to see what a month's work would accomplish.

Judge Matchett and J. L. Jacobs, county efficiency expert, were in unending opposition. They said Mr. Carr had more than enough employees already to do the extra work.

The present system of having the state's attorney sue for taxes, then compromise for reduced amounts to save costs of litigation, was condemned as tedious and impractical.

CHILD LABOR LAW FOE CALLED TOOL OF MILL OWNER

Labor Paper Hits Alleged Farmer League.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 29.—[Special.]—In an article appearing in today's issue of Labor, official newspaper of sixteen railroad labor organizations, the Farmers' State Rights League, which has been opposing the child labor amendment, is exposed as "the tool of David Clark, publisher of the Southern Textile Bulletin, organ of the Southern textile mill owners, of Charlotte, N. C." Mr. Clark, it is alleged, was the instigator of the suits which resulted in the nullification of two former federal child labor laws.

"This 'Farmers' league' is flooding western papers—especially agricultural papers—with half page advertisements denouncing the proposed child labor amendment," says Labor.

Paper Investigates.
"Labor decided to make an investigation and sent a staff representative to North Carolina who uncovered the following facts:
"The Farmers' State Rights League is not a farmers' organization.
"Its president is cashing the cotton mill bank. Its vice president is an employee of a cotton mill store. Its chief agent is listed in the Charlotte (N. C.) city directory as an employee of the Clark Publishing company.
"The latter is owned by David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin, organ of the cotton mill owners of the south. Mr. Clark for many years has been head of the cotton mill lobby, which has operated in Washington and elsewhere.
"It is perfectly clear from Labor's investigation that the 'Farmers' States' Rights League' is a fake."

Arkansas Senate Reopens.
Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 29.—The Arkansas senate today adopted a resolution "deploring" the action of a special session of the legislature last year which voted ratification of the proposed federal child labor amendment.

Thrown Out in Washington.
Olympia, Wash., Jan. 29.—The lower house of the Washington legislature today defeated, 67 to 30, a resolution to ratify a child labor amendment. Immediately afterward it tabled a resolution adopted by the senate rejecting the federal amendment. This was understood to complete action by the present session of the legislature on the amendment.

BLAMES HOSTILE LOBBY
Friends of the child labor amendment to the constitution went on with their fight yesterday, heedless of the fact that with thirteen state legislatures recorded against it the bill stands virtually defeated.
It was freely charged that foes of the measure had used misrepresentation to swing popular sentiment against it.

"The loudly voiced opposition farmers to the amendment originated in the mind of a prominent lobbyist in Washington," asserted Samuel R. Guard, director of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation, before a Hamilton club audience. "That lobbyist cleverly misrepresented the amendment as an attempt to prohibit the work of boys and girls on the farm."

"There is child slavery on the farm just as bad as that in the mills, and it should be prevented. But no one proposes to deprive country boys and girls of the great rural privilege of helping with the farm work, or doing the chores, or taking a man's place now and then."

Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the child labor committee, continuing his Chicago campaign with speeches at Loyola university and at a meeting at the Chicago Woman's club, sponsored by that club, the Illinois League of Women Voters, and other organizations.

"Earlier constitutional guarantees of state sovereignty must, in the target of social progress, be modified to conform with the changes of industrial development," he declared. "The fathers of the constitution could not foresee child labor, but they could foresee social and economic changes which would necessitate amendment, and so provided for it."

Capt. Mullin, Suspended by Collins, Resigns
Capt. Joseph C. Mullin, suspended from the police department Jan. 15 by Chief Collins when he appeared in the latter's office in an intoxicated condition, tendered his resignation yesterday. Had the resignation been delayed longer, charges of drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an officer were to have been filed against him before the civil service commission.

Palmyra Tree on board the south sea, is started through her porthole window. She is not the determined to quarrel who confessed he is a young man. Olive, hiding away at Palmyra's refusal to leave the yacht at Honolulu. The yacht Rainbow is wrecked appears on the Plores of Honolulu to investigate and find her who wrecked her yacht. Olive at Palmyra's refusal to leave for the south sea, she is left alone. In the morning she awakes from a long swim, he falls as he communicates to her the sea. He makes her a life the empty ocean. They must measure for help, and again in pursuit of them. He cleverly is the Imperial Japanese, Palmyra in command. Olive is in close pursuit. Because they land on Olive's island, and her parents. Palmyra leaves. Olive follows. Palmyra is aroused and her parents join it. Olive finds Palmyra.

Burke's scrutiny took in real danger. Savage in sequence. But the urchin still craves his eyes opened wide, he bundles of stiff bark cloth. From within there came

From the audience a cry. The white man burst in. He reached up, seized the outer flap of the rug, yanked out, and the girl was limbo bent double, bounding. Palmyra Tree had lost. "So—that was it." Unlucky expected, accepted fate as if she were already dead. He stood now, blinking at the boat as if it were a monster. "Alone," he muttered. "That word stung him. He had, he raged. "I can't have her. I tell his voice was anguished. He was feeling for this power to abandon her. (Copy)

Time Comes for Cinderella to Rise in Revolt

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I read so much about young girls who don't assume any responsibility, and parents who are spoiling their daughters by giving everything and demanding nothing," writes a young girl. "Not long ago I read what you had to say on teaching daughters to do housework. I wish you could get a glimpse into my home. You'd have something to say on the other side."

"Ever since I can remember—and that is no exaggeration, for at 4 I began to do small things about the house—I have helped my mother. When the boys were small she worked, too, but they are working now and I am out of high school, and she thinks she is through. I've had my share of work," she says. "Now I'm going to have a good time," and she is gone most of the time.

"I wouldn't mind doing my share, although I would like to work downtown, or go to college, or fit myself for something. But mother says, 'You're fitted for matrimony when the right man comes along.'"

"That's true enough, but how am I ever going to meet the right man when I don't get much time off as the average maid in a home? Sometimes I get so discouraged and blue I could die. Dad's a peach, but when I say anything to him he only sighs and says, 'No use bucking against your mother. Something may happen some day.'"

"I'm 24. For six years I've slaved at home. We take a few boarders, for dad's business isn't what it used to be. The boarders have young children, and I'm the one who stays at home nights when they want to go out. I'm never going to be young again. I've never been really young, for that matter. If I ever have children, believe me, they'll not be made to do a thing that isn't absolutely necessary."

"In that case you would be going to the opposite extreme. Not giving a child any responsibility is almost as bad as giving a child too much. I say almost, for I don't believe there is anything more cruel or unfair than robbing a young girl of her right to enjoy life, as far as it is possible. But where it is not necessary through grim and tragic circumstance, there is no act more unpardonable on the part of the parent."

A girl of 24 in the predicament of the young girl of the letter surely has the right to revolt. She might call a family council and discuss the matter—announce that she is through doing more than her share; as long as she lives at home she will do her part, but only her legitimate part. With boys at home working, and boarders besides, she should be able to afford enough help to lighten her work considerably, even if the mother refuses to assume much of the burden.

A girl I know did much this same thing, recently, in regard to her parents. She was 23, and ever since she had been working had turned over everything she made to her father. She had to ask him for money for clothes, incidentals and pleasures, and he gave it to her the way he had always given it to his wife, grudgingly and complainingly.

She "struck" finally, called a family council, and declared she'd pay her board, give a Christmas bonus, as she expressed it, and no more. No more was necessary, for her father, being extremely prudent, was also extremely prosperous.

Some fathers and some mothers, too, will impose as far as they can. By the time a boy or girl has reached the age of 25, he or she must use a bit of judgment and decide how much should be stood for, and how much should be actively protested against. Whether the imposed upon member of the family group is parent or child, there comes a time when patience ceases its virtuous aspect.

Dog Harness Offer.

"I have some harness that will fit a medium sized dog to offer to some reader who is interested in having it."

"M. N."

In the city it is sometimes hard to keep a dog your own without the aid of a harness of some sort. Write to us if you desire the harness so kindly offered.

In Need of Clothes.

"I have a boy 16 years old, who is about to go to work, but he is so shabby in his old clothes I am sure he cannot find a job. I wonder if some one has a discarded suit which could be passed on to him? I would greatly appreciate the gift, and also a dress or coat, size 44-46, for myself, if some one has it to spare, for we have no money to spend on clothes and are greatly in need of them."

"Mrs. M. Mc."

We shall be happy to give you this address, should you desire to help.

HAROLD TEEN—GOOFY WAS FLATTER THAN A TILE FLOOR

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS

Best to Ignore It.

"Dear Miss Blake: For the last six months I have been devoting my attention to a pretty blonde girl in the office of my place of business. It seems that our office has fallen a victim to a so-called flake. This self-appointed sheik forced himself on most every girl in the general office, particularly the one I am in love with. Would I be right in requesting this sheik to discontinue this practice on the girl I soon wish to become my wife?"

H. R. C.

If he had singled out your pretty blonde instead of inflicting himself on all the girls, you might have reason to feel concerned, but as it is, the best thing for you to do is to overlook him.

It entirely, son. The sheik would feel flattered to know he had caused you some uneasy moments, so do not give him this satisfaction.

Don't Miss Good Times.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and am in love with a fellow six years my senior. He treats me wonderfully and always keeps his promises. The question is, how can I tell if he loves me? Red Head."

Red Head, why not content yourself with knowing that the young man is a good friend? I am sure you wouldn't want to be in love at your age, dear, for if you were just think of all the good times you would miss going out with your other friends.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Spoiling the Effect.

I was called to the phone by a friend, and after finishing the conversation thought I would impress the other monographs, so put my hand over the book and kept on talking as if some one were listening, saying, "Meet you at the Gladstone for lunch? Surely I will," etc. Imagine my utter embarrassment when the telephone rang loudly and I had to answer it in front of the bunch.

H. K.

On All Fours.

I was in high school. Before dismissal for lunch the students were called together for announcements. As these were often tiresome we tried to avoid them. My seat was near the back of the room so I proceeded on all fours to leave.

I saw human feet; I looked up and up until finally I looked into the face of one of my teachers.

I was too frightened to stop. The really embarrassing part came when, before the whole assembly, my seat was changed from the back to a place directly in front of the principal's desk.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

Some of Antoinette Donnelly's recipes for youth and beauty, together with suggestions for personal hygiene, have been assembled in a 64 page booklet, "Advice to Women." It will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents. Address: The Tribune Public Service Bureau, 111 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

J. R. C.: WHETHER OR NOT an operation for the relief of cross eyes is advisable may be determined by a competent ophthalmologist. There may be some reason why such an operation should not be performed, but where it is considered advisable it will undoubtedly be successful, as operations for the relief of this condition are being successfully performed right along.

TONY: TROUBLED WITH COLD feet? This is due to poor circulation. What you need is foot and ankle exercises. Walking will stimulate the circulation, if you walk briskly. A cold plunge or bath, which should be followed by a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel, is also good.

Paolowa Tea Given by Arts Club Magnet for Fashionable Folk

BY PANDORA.

In spite of the annual call of sunnier lands and extensive lists of Chicagoans en route to other climes there seems to be a generous slice of this city's beau monde still here, ready to extend a welcoming, hospitable hand to those who knock at our gates. Apparently every chair and table, every knife and fork, and all the china were called into use yesterday at the luncheon given by and at the Arts Club for Mrs. Anna Pavlova and her guests.

Mrs. Pavlova, looking exquisite almost beyond belief (I assure you this enthusiasm is shared by all those who saw and met her yesterday), responded even more briefly, but quite as elegantly, after which Adolph Bolm gave an informal little talk about the early adventures of Mrs. Pavlova and other Russian dancers who left Russia for Europe and other parts of the globe.

Apocryphal sayings, there are listed among the hosts for dinner this evening at the Casino Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strobel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, and Mrs. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank.

Day's News in Society

Nearly every mail bears one of the Arts club's white announcement obituaries. The guests' committee has issued invitations for a luncheon next Tuesday for Mrs. Anna Pavlova and her guests. Mrs. Anna Pavlova will be the guest of Mrs. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, and Mrs. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank.

The portrait exhibition at the Chicago Johnson gallery is to remain open until Sunday, according to the latest announcement from the committee in charge, headed by Mrs. Walter S. Brewster. Mrs. Anna Pavlova will be a guest at the exhibition this afternoon. Proceeds are to benefit the Public School Art Society.

Again It's Cretonne for the Southland

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—

There was a young lady from Cretonne who looked so exceedingly neat on the beach where she walked. That all her friends talked about the cretonne of Cretonne.

Yes, the days of cretonne have come, the gayest of the year. Once more stay at home as pressing cold noses to show windows to sniff the suggestion of balmy breezes offered by flowered prints. Bathing suits, jackets, frocks and coats of this charmingly figured fabric bring the south breeze to us.

The ensemble principle which has actuated much of our dressing this fall is operating no less effectively among Palm Beach costumes. Many of the collections show delightful combinations of cretonne or chintz with such light fabrics as voile and crepe. In such ensembles the dress is apt to show a border of figured stuff and itself to sponsor either white or a solid tint which reappears in the combining print.

Coats which are either to be worn separately or with matching frock seem to favor the three-quarter length. The unvaried straightness of the silhouette they offer is emphasized by plain borders which also trim the much stressed patch pockets and often the bottom of the sleeve.

Today's model is a separate coat fashioned of cretonne charmingly patterned in gay flowers. Its long tuxedo revers are faced with a brown linen which also binds the deep pockets. It is closed in front with a ribbon of matching brown.

Presents Creed
to President

BY ARTHUR SEARS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—That France is paying its war debt to America, Emile Daelechner, the new French ambassador, informed President Coolidge today upon presenting his credentials at the White House. The ambassador also made a thinly veiled but significant plea for further participation by the United States in the stabilization of Europe.

The ambassador and the President in the of greetings agreed that gratitude incurred by French assistance in the situation had been repaid, aid to France in the war.

Has Right to Make

The two nations now solve the question of debts as distinguished by gratitude. It has been Paris that the new French is authorized to begin new terms of payment of the debt. The debt funding is awaiting any communication Daelechner may make.

"History, which often has demonstrated that America have in turn extended at critical times efficacious assistance, to each other their debt of gratitude as they are firmly settled as the case arises of material debts," the ambassador in addressing Mr. Coolidge.

"But the effort which France put forth in the of their principles can be usefully in the study of on which, together with tenance of peace, the the world's financial balance.

Depend on Each

"Daily events show the interest of nations are dependent. The program every branch of science with the distance that the world moves toward laboration. The auspicious of the plane of financial recently put into operation valuable and effective institution of America, which hopes to see continue in.

"You may be assured spare no effort in carrying out this issue, with the extend to me, the high which I have been entrusted with great importance and I fully realize."

Coolidge Answer

"The kindly support received in our struggle since developed into friendship and it was the millions of young Americans by side with the of France in defense of the Coolidge responded.

"Thus was paid the debt and, as you so rich both governments show deep satisfaction in the material debts shall also.

"In the relations of like individuals, possess characters as well as in and aspirations, complete not at all times obtain, years through which America have passed, as disagreements as may be note no profound diver toward the fundamental.

See Future De

"In the relations problems inevitably arise for their solution a practical collaboration, torio friendship and will between our two enduring basis, we look with firm assurance.

"I am sure that we will continue to work whatever is good, for we on mutual respect, for international understanding, glad, therefore, to witness that you will be a preter of France to America to France; to our happiness in having and of our willingness of common interest to you."
